

1. No. Static member function are called on the class, not object of the class, and since the member variable a belongs to each individual object of the class, the member variable cannot be called.

2. Yes. This static member variable is shared with all objects of the class, and can be accessed by any object under the class.