By doing this, we are wasting time and memory. When we call the copy constructor, we are making a copy of class X to pass into the member function. Then, we are making another copy of the class X inside of the member function. Overall, we made two copies, one of which is unnecessary, and therefore wasted time and memory.